

THE BIGGEST THINGS.

Interesting Facts Useful When You
Get Into an Argument.

Philadelphia Bulletin.
The largest theater in the world is the new Opera House in Paris. It covers nearly three acres of ground; its cubic mass is 4,287,000 feet; it costs about 100,000,000 francs. The largest suspension bridge is the one between New York City and Brooklyn; the length of the main span is 1,595 feet 6 inches; the entire length of the bridge is 5,980 feet. The loftiest active volcano is Popocatepetl, "smoking mountain," thirty-five miles south-west of Puebla, Mexico; it is 17,748 feet above the sea level, and has a crater three miles in circumference and 1,000 feet deep. The longest span of wire in the world is used for a telegraph in India over the River Kistna. It is more than 6,000 feet in length, and is 7,300 feet high. The largest ship in the world is the Great Eastern; she is 680 feet long, 83 feet broad, and 60 feet deep, being 28,827 tons burden, 18,915 gross and 13,244 net register.

THE GREATEST FORTRESS.

From a strategical point of view, the famous stronghold of Gibraltar. It occupies a rocky peninsula jutting out into the sea, about three miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide. One central rock rises to the height of 1,435 feet above the sea level. Its northern face is almost perpendicular, while its eastern side is full of tremendous precipices. On the south it terminates in what is called Europa Point. The west side is less steep than the east, and between its base and the sea is the narrow, almost level span on which the town of Gibraltar was built. The fortress is considered impregnable to military assault. The regular garrison in time of peace numbers about seven thousand.

The biggest cavern is the Mammoth Cave in Edmonson County, Ky. It is near Green River, about six miles from Cave City, and twenty-eight from Bowling Green. The cave consists of a succession of irregular chambers, some of which are large, situated on different levels. Some of these are traversed by navigable branches of the subterranean Echo River. Blind fish are found in its waters.

THE LONGEST TUNNEL.

In the world is that of the St. Gothard, on the line of the railroad between Lucerne and Milan. The summit of the tunnel is 900 feet below the surface at Andermatt, and 6,000 feet beneath the peak of Kastelhorn, the St. Gothard group. The tunnel is 26 1/2 feet wide, and is 18 feet 10 inches from the floor to the crown of the arched roof. It is 9 1/2 miles long, 1 1/2 miles longer than the Mont Cenis Tunnel.

The biggest trees in the world are the mammoth trees of California. One in a grove in Tulare County, according to measurements made by members of the State Geologist's Survey, was shown to be 275 feet in height, 108 feet in circumference at base, and 76 feet at a point 12 feet above ground. Some of the trees are 376 feet high and 34 feet in diameter. Some of the largest that have been felled indicate an age of from 2,000 to 2,500 years.

THE LARGEST DESERT.

Is that of Sahara, a vast region of Northern Africa, extending from the Atlantic Ocean on the west to the Valley of the Nile on the east. The length from east to west is about 3,000 miles, its average breadth about 900 miles, its area about 2,000,000 square miles. Rain falls in torrents in the Sahara at intervals of five, ten and twenty years. In summer the heat during the day is excessive, but the nights are often cold. In winter the temperature is sometimes below freezing point. The greatest pyramid is that of Cheops, one of the three pyramids forming the Memphis Group, situated on a plateau about 137 feet above the level of the highest rise in the Nile. Its dimensions have been reduced by the removal of the outer portions to furnish stone for the city of Cairo. Its masonry consisted originally of 89,028,000 cubic feet, and still amounts to 82,111,000 cubic feet. The present vertical height is 450 feet against 479 feet originally. The total weight of the stone is 3,315,000 tons. The largest bell in the world was at the great bell in Moscow, at the foot of the Kremlin. Its circumference at the bottom is nearly 68 feet, and its height more than 21 feet. In its steepest part it is 23 inches thick, and its weight has been computed to be 443,722 pounds. It has never been rung.

Declined With Thanks.

A New York tough was being examined for killing a man. The accused stated that he had only given the deceased one blow with his fist. His Honor said: "I can't understand how it is possible for a man to be killed by a single blow of the fist. I repeat, I can't understand it."

"Yes, can't you? Want me to show you?" replied the tough, sliding up to the court and drawing back a fist as big as a family Bible.

The offer was declined, with thanks. —Teens' Slings.

The Condition of the Indians Under This Administration.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs J. D. C. Atkins, begins his annual report by calling attention to the unimproving condition of the Indians. He says that another year's practical trial of this "humanitarian and peace system" only adds cumulative testimony to the civilization over any other ever yet tried. This progress has been made without any corresponding increase in expenditures. In fact, the estimates for carrying on the Indian service have been reduced from $7,328,049 in 1885 to $5,608,873 for 1886, and for an increase of $17,500 in estimates for educational work the reduction would have been greater.

Referring to the existing state of things in Indian Territory, the Commissioner vigorously attacks the tribal system and says:

"At present the rich Indians who cultivate tribal lands pay no rent to the poorer members of their tribes, although they are equal owners of the soil. The rich men have two large homesteads, and control many times more than their share of the land. And these the sacred rights secured by treaty, which the United States are pledged to respect and defend? If so, the United States are pledged to uphold and maintain a stupendous land monopoly and aristocracy that finds no parallel in this country except in two or three localities in the far West. It would be best for the Indians to divide their land in severalty, allowing 100 acres to each head of a family and 80 acres to each minor child. The large surplus remaining should be sold to actual settlers at a just price, and the proceeds would enable the poorer Indians to improve their allotments, put up school buildings, etc."

Let these Indians once assume all of the responsibilities of citizens of the United States, with its laws extended as a protectingegis over them, and the day of their freedom and apprehensions of marauding whites will be forever ended. When this is done the five civilized tribes of the Indian Territory will be ready to form a Territorial Government and pass, as other Territories, under the protection of our Constitution and laws, and represented in Congress by their own Delegates."

The Commissioner dwells at length upon the surplus land in the Indian Territory, and says:

"We are the Indians of the United States to be protected and transplanted to this Territory there would tend to be, including those now resident there, 250,000 acres for each living Indian. This is estimating the whole Indian population of the United States, excluding Alaska, at 200,000."

The Commissioner, in treating of Indian schools, speaks of the difficulty experienced in freeing the pupils from adverse home influence, and says:

"At this time, however, I could not advise diminution of material aid and support to any of the different kinds of schools now fostered by the Government. All are doing excellent and efficient service in their particular spheres, and all are preparing a good part in the work of educating and civilizing the Indians. As an incentive to make the best use of the educational advantages afforded pupils of both sexes, I think it would be wise for Congress to make an appropriation from which every Indian youth who shall graduate from school and marry an Indian maiden who has also graduated may be assisted in settling upon a homestead of 160 acres, purchasing a team, breaking and fencing land, and building a house. If the homestead is not on an Indian reservation the man should also have the privilege of citizenship, including the right of suffrage. Such a law would greatly encourage Indian youths and maidens in their resistance to the evil and savage influences of their untutored fathers, and would successfully prevent them from a return to savage life."

The Commissioner urges the necessity for an appropriation to defray the expenses of taking a census of the Indians. He says the outlay would be inconsiderable when compared with the great saving it would effect.

Some wag has started this story on the brave old Fifteenth Iowa. The Thirty-second Illinois was attached to Belknap's brigade of the Seventeenth corps on the march from Savannah to the sea. On a certain day that regiment was rear guard, and some boys of the regiment went to a house near the road prospecting. They found nothing but an old man, who said that the Illinois soldiers had stolen everything he had they could carry, and had carried everything off and left him nothing. But he said, there was one thing they could not steal and that was his faith in the Lord Jesus. "Don't you be too sure of that," said the Sucker, "the Fifteenth Iowa will pass here soon, and if they run low on faith they'll yank it out of you."

The Beauty of Woman

is her crown of glory. But alas! how quickly does the nervous debility and chronic weakness of the sex cause the bloom of youth to pass away, sharpen the lovely features, and enslave the rounded form! There is but one remedy which will restore the faded roses and bring back the grace of youth. It is Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," a sovereign remedy for the diseased condition of females. It is one of the greatest boons ever conferred upon the human race, far it preserves that which is fairest and dearest to all mankind—the beauty and the health of woman.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, and in this way positively cures catarrh.

"Sellers' Liver Pills" have been the standard remedy for malady, liver complaint, costiveness, etc., for fifty years.

Packing and Preserving Apples.

The American Rural Home.

Nothing in connection with orcharding calls louder for improvement than the packing of apples. The reputation of orchardists has suffered greatly in the past by the condition of apples in barrels when opened in the large markets of the country. In too many cases barrels have been opened with one or two layers of large, fair, sound apples on top, and the middle filled up with small, gnarled, wormy apples, utterly unfit for dessert fruit, or for any other purpose. The entire business suffers from such dishonesty on the part of the few. If the first purchasers from producers were careful enough in their inspection, such fruit would be rejected, and dishonest packers would be the only losers, but in the rush of business, barrels are passed without proper inspection, go on to the seaboard cities, are there detected, and as the guilty ones cannot be discovered, the reputation of all engaged in the business suffers.

In packing apples, the ends of the barrels should fairly represent the entire contents. There can be no objection to placing the stems of the apples on top, but at the same time we are willing to admit that the superstitious idea concerning the transmission of an editor's soul prevails in the West and to a great extent in Texas. In that State whenever a newspaper man sees a white mule he invariably points to him and says:

"LOOK AT THAT OLD EDITOR!" Over yonder pulling a load of cord wood, and if the mule happens to pass near him he touches his hat respectfully and says: "How are you, Colonel?" and the aged and solemn animal always drops his ears in a friendly manner, apparently in recognition of the salute. There are many Texas journalists, among them Major Dan McGary, of the Houston Evening Age, who are thoroughly convinced that after death an editor is transformed into an elegant milk-white mule of gigantic stature and dignified bearing. Major McGary, who has devoted much of his time to making searching inquiries, says that after years of patient investigation he has never seen a white mule dead. He has also frequently and publicly stated that he has never failed, as well as he can remember,

TO LET HIS HAT

In the presence of a white mule, and every time he did so the mule's eyes brightened with a happy smile, and the animal uttered a very intelligent and joyful cry, and tried hard to speak to him.

Major McGary may be sincere in his belief that when he turns up his toes he will become a white mule and perhaps is greatly consoled by it. There are thousands of editors who have a perfect horror of death, for the reason they fear that in the next world, either in the upper or lower end of it, they will be forced to continue in the newspaper business; therefore the idea of becoming a white mule with such light work as pulling a plow or day to perform is embraced by them with eager delight.

The Fuel of the Future.

It is a fact well known in manufacturing circles that the vast bulk of the heat contained in coal is wasted. Only four per cent of the hundred parts of carbon is actually utilized. Hence, one of the problems of chemistry has been to get more power, in the way of heat and light, out of a given quantity of coal. Prof. T. S. C. Lowe claims to have solved this problem, a matter which is of vast importance, if it is a fact. The process is to pulverize the coal, and in converting it into a gas, the coal is reduced to a powdered form so fine that it will float in the atmosphere, and it is carried by such light work as pulling a plow or day to perform is embraced by them with eager delight.

Life in the Wild West.

A man who recently settled in the Yakima county was in town a few days ago. He was giving a sketch of the trials and troubles he had to encounter in founding a home, and with which all of us are familiar, and who have gone West to grow up with the country. While his neighbors generally were kind and accommodating, there was a man on the next claim to him who he could not believe to be honest. When asked what reason he had to doubt this neighbor's honesty he said: "When I moved on the place I took with me a cow. I had bought all the way from the coast. When I was about half way across the country I was overtaken by a band of robbers and put his brand on her. Of course she jumped and knocked me over and in the row he escaped without me seeing him. Next day he came and claimed his cow, and as his brand was on her he took her. Of course when he had got his brand on the animal he owned her, for such has been the custom in that section from time immemorial; but I don't consider him a strictly honest man."

A Hint to Mistresses.

Find fault, when you must find fault, in private, if possible, and some time after the offense rather than at the time. The blamed are less inclined to resist when they are blamed without witnesses. Both parties are kinder, and the accused person may be able to find the fault of the accused, who has seen the fault, and watched for a private and proper time for mentioning it. Never be harsh or unjust to your children or servants. Firmness, with gentleness of demeanor and a regard to the feelings, constitute that authority which is always respected and valued. If you have any cause to complain of a servant never speak hastily. Wait, at all events, until you have had time to reflect on the nature of the offense.

A JOURNALISTIC SUPERSTITION.

Do Newspaper Men Become White Mules When They Lay Down Their Quills?

New Orleans States.

An editor out West seriously remarks that he has good reason to believe that newspaper men become white mules after death, because the expression on the countenance of a white mule has often reminded him of some deceased brother journalist, especially the despondent droop of the lower lip. He also calls attention to the fact that editors and white mules seldom die and are awful hard to kill.

The more we ponder over this Western editor's words the firmer we are convinced that there is some connection between the countenance of a white mule and the countenance of a journalist, but at the same time we are willing to admit that the superstitious idea concerning the transmission of an editor's soul prevails in the West and to a great extent in Texas. In that State whenever a newspaper man sees a white mule he invariably points to him and says:

She Held a High Office.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—"Why, dear," said Mr. Topony to his wife, as he started down town, "this is a masonic day with us, and as I am to attend the meeting of the general grand council of the royal and select masters, I will not be home to dinner, and may not even be back until late in the night. So do not be alarmed by my absence. We will be very busy, you know, my dear."

"Oh, you will, will you?" replied Mrs. Topony, frowning up. "The select masters, is it? And you'll be out till late?"

"Yes, my dear," he answered, gently.

"Early, you mean," she snapped. "Well, go on; but let me tell you, Topony, that there is a special grand council of the royal and select masters in the house, and I'm the M. P. G. G. M. and the P. B. G. D. M. and the P. D. Q. and all the rest of the meeting, and if you come poking around that night-late with your watch key at 3 a. m. trying to wind up the lock, as you did once before, I'll come down and open the hall with a grand chapter on wives' rights that will make you think that you have been riding a goat for a Do you know the motto? Now, go, but don't let the servants tell you, or your memory, or you'll be sorry for it."

Mr. Topony picked up his hat and went away silently.

Did Washington Eat Green Peas With a Knife?

Magnificent American History. The following extract is taken from the "Elementary History of the United States," by G. P. Quackenbush, 1886. The author has not said enough in repeating an absurd story about an attempt to poison General Washington in June, 1779, which has no foundation, but he is also guilty of accusing the great hero of eating green peas with a knife. "Fixing his eyes upon the guilty man, he put a spoonful of peas on his plate, and asked him: 'Shall I eat of these?' 'I don't know,' stammered the man, turning deadly pale. Washington took some on his knife, and again asked: 'Shall I eat of these?' The man could not say a word, but raised his hand as if to prevent it."

The Most Nutritious Food.

Beans are the most nutritious food, says the New York Times. They contain twenty-four per cent of protein in the shape of legumine—a substance having the properties and very much the same composition as casein, and of which very good cheese can be made—and forty-five per cent of carbonaceous matters, against ten per cent of protein and sixty-eight per cent of carbonaceous matters in corn. Hence, with corn in nearly equal quantities, the mixture will make a perfectly balanced food, and therefore one that would be found an antidote to the fatal hog cholera which prevails where corn is the sole pork-making food. When beans are ground with corn, the meal is readily eaten by all animals, and is especially valuable for horses. When fed to cows the meal produces rich and abundant milk. Hence, discolored beans can be most profitably used for feeding, and should not be sent to market to lower the price of good ones.

For the relief and cure of the inflammation and congestion called "a cold in the head" there is more potency in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Dr. Williams' Pink Pills prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other modes of treatment have proved of no avail.

One of the most important industries of the day is the canning trade, and Maryland and California are the principal canning States. Maryland alone gives employment to 60,000 persons in canning fruits and oysters, the estimate being 150,000,000 cans annually. The principal canning in California is in fruit and almonds.
